97. 14 Civil War Letters, 13 from Madill, Henry John - Col., 141st Regt. Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry Brevet Brig. Gen. U.S.V. December 2 1864, Brevet Maj. Gen. U.S.V. March 13 1865, to Thomas Madill, MD (Brother), Wysox, Bradford Co. PA, and one letter to Mrs Rosia Madill (Mother), Wysox, Bradford Co. One letter is a note allowing Thomas Madill to tend to Gen. Madill, wounded in a recent battle.

Letters contain accounts of battles, field hospitals. Letters from 1862-1865.

From Dyer, Frederick H. A Compendium of the War of the Rebellion
The regiment was organized in August 1862, with Henry J. Madill as colonel, Guy H. Watkins as lieutenant colonel, and Israel P. Spalding as major.

The regiment became part of the 1st Brigade of the 1st Division of the III Corps. At the Battle of Fredericksburg, the regiment formed part of the force which engaged the Confederate right flank but lost few men. After the battle, the regiment went into winter quarters, but in the spring of 1863 was heavily engaged at the Battle of Chancellorsville, May 1-3, 1863, suffering over 50% casualties.

At the Battle of Gettysburg on July 2, 1863, the unit was detached from the rest of the brigade and sent to the southern part of the Peach Orchard. There, the 141st helped repel the attack of Brigadier General Joseph B. Kershaw's South Carolina Brigade. However, shortly after this the Peach Orchard salient began to collapse. Separated from the rest of its brigade, the regiment never received orders to withdraw and stayed in line of battle near the Peach Orchard. Possibly because of the thick battle smoke, the regiment did not fire on the approaching brigade of Brigadier General William Barksdale. The 141st suffered a devastating volley at close range from one of Barksdale's Mississippi regiments, and after a brief resistance withdrew towards Cemetery Ridge with a loss of almost 70% of its members. Of 209 men present for roll-call earlier in the day, 149 were killed, wounded, or missing in action.

Following the Gettysburg Campaign, the regiment fought in the Bristoe Station Campaign, seeing action at the Battle of Auburn Bridge, one of the final actions fought by the III Corps before its incorporation into the II Corps. The regiment received many replacements over the winter.

In 1864, the regiment fought in the Battle of the Wilderness (May 6-7, 1864), the Battle of Spotsylvania (May 11-12, 1864), and at the Battle of Petersburg (June 18, 1864). The regiment then took part in the Siege of Petersburg.

The 141st participated in the final campaign of the Army of the Potomac and fought at the Battle of Saylor's Creek on March 25, 1865, and again at the Battle of Farmville (April 6-7, 1865). The 141st was present at the surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia at Appomattox Court House. The regiment participated in the Grand Review in Washington and was mustered out on May 29, 1865.
